

IMA To Feature 'Llhuros' Exhibit

The Indianapolis Museum of Art

The Indianapolis Star | October 28, 1973

THE INDIANAPOLIS MUSEUM OF ART will open a special exhibition entitled "Civilization of Llhuros" Nov. 7 in the third floor South Gallery.

The exhibition, organized by the Andrew Dickson White Museum of Art at Cornell University (now the Herbert Johnson Museum of Art), concerns itself with the discovery of a previously unknown civilization, 'Llhuros.'

All of the fragmentary "remnants" of the Llhuroscian culture are the product of a single contemporary artist, Norman Daly, who has been professor of painting and sculpture at Cornell University since 1942.

Daly, who received a grant from the Creative Artists Program Service, has worked within this pseudo-anthropological framework for the, last several years "creating artifacts, writing Llhuroscian poetry and music, and establishing a considerable body of Llhuroscian scholarship."

The exhibition consists of more than 100 objects. Taped sound will provide music, translations of chants and an interview with Llhuroscian anthropologists.

Slated to be a spoof at scholarship, the exhibition will continue through Dec. 16. The artist will be at the museum to lecture on the exhibition and its concept Nov. 14 in the DeBoest Lecture Hall at the IMA. An illustrated catalogue will accompany the exhibit.

IMA To Feature 'Llhuros' Exhibit

THE INDIANAPOLIS Museum of Art will open a special exhibition entitled "Civilization of Llhuros" Nov. 7 in the third floor South Gallery.

The exhibition, organized by the Andrew Dickson White Museum of Art at Cornell University (now the Herbert F. Johnson Museum of Art), concerns itself with the "discovery" of a previously unknown civilization, "Llhuros."

All of the fragmentary "remnants" of the Llhuroscian culture are the product of a single contemporary artist, Norman Daly, who has been professor of painting and sculpture at Cornell University since 1942.

DALY, who received a grant from the Creative Artists Program Service, has worked within this pseudo-anthropological framework for the last several years "creating artifacts, writing Llhuroscian poetry and music, and establishing a considerable body of Llhuroscian scholarship."

The exhibition consists of more than 100 objects. Taped sound will provide music, translations of chants and an interview with Llhuroscian anthropologists.

Slated to be a spoof at scholarship, the exhibition will continue through Dec. 16. The artist will be at the museum to lecture on the exhibition and its concept Nov. 14 in the DeBoest Lecture Hall at the IMA. An illustrated catalogue will accompany the exhibit.

★